POLICE CAPTURE TWO YOUTHS IN ARMED ROBBERY

Columbus Officers Report Filling Station Holdup Confessed by Pair

WEAPONS, MONEY FOUND

Suspects Name Springfield As Their Home

Two Springfield, O., youths were captured in the north end of Circleville at 1:30 a. m. Friday while they were allegedly fleeing after a filling station holdup in Columbus a short time earlier. They gave their names as William Nelson, 19, 1306 Montgomery avenue, and Glenn Byerly, 21, 301 Franklin street.

Columbus police, who returned them to the capital city at 3:45 a. m., said they had confessed an armed robbery of a station at 1803 S. High street.

The youths were caught by Night Patrolman Alva Shasteen and George Green just north of the Circleville city limits. The officers had heard the state highway patrol broadcast the report of the robbery, and drove north on Court street to patrol the Route 23 entrance to the city. Their watchfulness was rewarded a short time later when a Ford, described over the radio, loomed into sight.

The policemen chased the Ford only a few blocks before the youths surrendered. The arrest was completed without any trouble on the part of the suspects despite the fact they had a loaded rifle and a revolver in their car.

They were taken to the police headquarters where they were kept until Patrolmen Werner D. Austin and J. S. Teele, of the Columbus department, came for them.

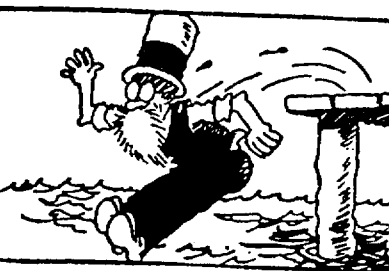

Besides the arms, the Circleville policemen found $30 in bills, $17.25 in silver, and $12 in Byerly's pockets. The amount of money stolen from the filling station was not announced.

YOUTH GRILLED IN SHADEVILLE TRAGEDY FREED

Sheriff Radcliff said the youth, named Stoner, formerly lived in West Virginia. The car involved in the accident bore West Virginia tags. The youth now lives just south of the Franklin county line.

Police Seek New Clues In Deaths

Three Autopsies Ordered in Cincinnati 'Poison Plot' Inquiry

CINCINNATI, Aug. 13—(UP)—Police awaited today the outcome of three autopsies before continuing investigation of what they believed was a "poison plot" to obtain the savings of elderly men.

Physicians sought to determine if the bodies contained croton oil—a powerful dysenteric agent when in concentrated form. It is so obscure as a poison that it is not included on the standard check lists used in autopsies.

Police, meanwhile, abandoned questioning of Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, a 31-year-old blonde housewife.

MOTHER ADMITS FEEDING POISON TO HER SON, 6

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 13—(UP)—Rat poison which she spread in a hamburger sandwich killed her 6-year-old son, Jackie, Mrs. Lenore King, 27, member of a prominent St. Clair, Mo., family, told police today.

She admitted, police said, the poisoning of the boy and related an attempt to kill her small daughter, Jeannine, 5, and herself.

"I wanted to get rid of the children and myself because the parents of the man I was keeping company with in St. Clair didn't like me," she was quoted as saying.

Mrs. King said she brought the hamburger sandwiches to her hotel room on the pretext of having them for lunch. Unnoticed by the children, she said, she spread the rat poison on each of the sandwiches.

Jackie ate his hurriedly. Jeannine bit into her sandwich, spit it out and refused to eat. Remorse overcame Mrs. King, she related, and she threw away both the child's sandwich and her own.

The boy became ill an hour later. He died at 4 p. m.

Mrs. King said she called her father, William Barber, in St. Clair, Mo., explaining that Jackie was sick and asking him to come to St. Louis. When Barber arrived he notified police of the boy's death.

The woman confessed the slaying, police said, after first insisting that Jackie had accidentally swallowed the poison. She said her husband, a telephone lineman, deserted her in 1931.

Senate Bloc to Contest F.D.'s High Court Choice

FOES OF BLACK TO DELAY VOTE IN UPPER HOUSE

Friends of Alabama Man Say Confirmation To Be Overwhelming

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—(UP)—Threat of a senate battle over confirmation of Sen. Hugo L. Black as a member of the supreme court threw new dangers today before harassed leaders fighting to save President Roosevelt's battered legislative program.

A bloc of Republican and Democratic senators—resuming the strategy of their successful fight against the administration's judiciary reorganization program—pressed a determined campaign to delay approval of the Black nomination until "we've heard from the country."

The extent of opposition to the appointment of the Alabama Democrat as successor to retired Justice Willis Van Devanter was uncertain. Off-the-record as well as public comment showed that it would include most of the 17 Republican senators as well as an indefinite group of so-called Democratic conservatives.

Speedy Action Sought
Friends of Black, asserting that he would have an overwhelming majority, nevertheless sought to speed action by a judiciary subcommittee, the full committee and the senate to block opposition suggestions that the better part of a week would be required to get the nomination before the chamber.

Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, D., Ariz., of the committee, who vainly urged the senate to act yesterday, said that a special meeting of his group would be called for Saturday if the subcommittee, headed by Sen. M. M. Neely, D., W. Va., and heavily in favor of the nomination, should agree at its meeting this morning and ask for quick completion of the action.

But Sen. Warren R. Austin, R., Vt., and Sen. Edward R. Burke, D., Neb., led a vigorous fight against hurried approval by the committee. Austin, a member of the subcommittee and opposed to confirmation, estimated that four or five days should reasonably be required for action.

"The nomination is unconstitutional because Sen. Black would be accepting a post the emoluments of which have been increased by a congress in which he served," Austin said, referring to enactment of the supreme court justices full-pay retirement act. "I have found that a good many senators—both Democrats and Republicans—have this feeling."

WAGE AND HOUR BILL TO AWAIT NEXT SESSION?

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—(UP)—Chairman Mary T. Norton of the house labor committee today said she had "virtually given up hope" of securing right of way from the deadlocked house rules committee on the wage and hour bill. She admitted that chances were the measure would be delayed until next session.

Mrs. Norton said she was making every effort to break the deadlock, "but unless the rules committee gives up right of way we will have to remain here until the end of September to get action on the bill this session."

ARMY AND NAVY REVOLT UPSETS LATIN CABINET

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Aug. 13—(UP)—The Paraguayan army and navy revolted today against President Franco and forced his cabinet to resign.

Groups of rebel troops, which formerly belonged to the regular army in the North, entered the capital bringing to a climax a situation that had been reported as "grave."

The interior ministry yesterday had issued a communique saying the government had adopted measures to prevent a "confused situation" on the part of a sector of regular troops in the North.

This communique was the first intimation of any trouble although rumors of rebellion had circulated here for several days.

The communique claimed the entire country was calm.

The association of ex-combatants, consisting of veterans of the Chaco war with Bolivia, pledged its support to President Franco against "any eventuality."

Franco, Paraguayan hero of the Chaco war, became president as a result of a coup against the then established government.

Each member was requested to take his wife and his sweetheart. Bony fish were served with a view to choking many to death. The committee hoped to replace the 13 ambulances with hearses for the ride back home.

SOVIET AIRMEN FLY OVER POLE

Six Russians on Daring Journey to United States

MOSCOW, Aug. 13—(UP)—The Russian monoplane carrying six Soviet fliers on a flight from Moscow to the United States passed over the North Pole at 6:40 a. m. (EST) today.

Sigmund Levanovsky, in charge of the flight, reported that the four-motored plane was forced to an altitude of 18,500 feet by high, thick clouds over the Barents sea on the way to the pole.

Bad weather and thick clouds which would make it necessary to fly blind were forecast as far as the 30th parallel, beyond which the fliers are expected to encounter good weather and helpful tail winds.

There was some confusion as to the destination of the new flight as there had been during the previous ones. Before taking off from Moscow at 9 a. m. (EST) yesterday, it was indicated that Levanovsky planned to land finally at New York flying by way of Fairbanks, Edmonton, Canada, and perhaps, Chicago. But A. Vartanian, Soviet agent at Seattle, Wash., announced last night that the fliers planned to land at Oakland, Cal., opposite San Francisco.

A Truro housewife gave them dry clothes and food.

The fourth member of the party, Gregg Johnson, Herkimer, N. Y., department store worker and owner of the 16-foot dory, swam ashore after clinging to the boat with the others for 45 minutes.

CHINESE ARMY HEADQUARTERS, SHICHIAOCHUANG—Chinese massed in hundreds of thousands in north, aiming at isolating Japanese forces southwest and northwest of Peiping and south of Tientsin.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 13—(UP)—Japanese bluejackets and Chinese troops clashed in the streets of Shanghai today, in the first big test of arms for domination of this city of 3,500,000 people.

As night approached, the Japanese, bringing tanks, field artillery and trench mortars into action, were pushing back the Chinese along a line that stretched across the northern side of the city and its suburbs.

Six hundred miles to the north Japanese and Chinese armies met on three fronts, northwest of Peiping, southwest of Peiping and south of Tientsin, in battles that were developing still.

A United Press staff correspondent who reached the great Chinese base at Shichiaochuang, on the Peiping-Hankow railroad, found that Chinese armies were massing in astonishing number all through the North.

But here, the war was brought to one of the world's great, rich cities and a catastrophe was threatened.

Foreigners in Danger
Skirmishing in the streets turned into a formal battle in the northern section and United States marines and sailors of other foreign nations, were ready to join the Shanghai volunteer corps in protecting foreigners.

Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, U. S. navy, in his flagship the cruiser Augusta, steamed at full speed down the coast from Tsingtao to take command of the American naval and marine forces here.

The Japanese anger and anxiety at the sudden resistance of the Chinese was made evident. One bluejacket even fired half a dozen warning shots at two United Press writers to drive them away from the lines where we were watching detachments with rifles and machine guns attack Chinese positions.

Toward night, the Japanese reinforcements began arriving in big numbers along with truckloads of ammunition. The bluejackets would debouch from their trucks and go at once into action. On the northeast side, Japanese artillery was blasting away and great clouds of smoke were blown over the city from fires.

Where City Begins
The battle front was just where the teeming city and the suburbs merge. As the Japanese pressed (Continued on Page Eight)

Ben H. Gordon, councilman-at-large, who is leading the attack against the rate contract, expects all petitions to be filled in the next few days.

JUDGE DECIDES GAME DEVICES ARE NOT LEGAL

LANCASTER, Aug. 13—Judge Frank M. Acton, of Fairfield county common pleas court, has decided that pinball machines operated in Newark are gambling devices, and illegal. Judge Acton served in Licking county by assignment.

His decision was made in connection with a motion filed by the Ohio Sales Co. asking dismissal of its own action in obtaining an injunction against seizure of the machines. The motion was granted. The company obtained an injunction order after Judge Frank Slabaugh of Licking county issued an order against all forms of gambling.

One of the machines was exhibited in court when Judge Acton conducted a hearing July 28. "The court finds this machine to be a gambling device, unlawful to keep, exhibit or operate for gain, and that there can be no property rights in the same," Judge Acton held.

It was not immediately clear what the decision would mean to machines operating in Fairfield county. The ruling mentioned only the one machine held by Licking county.

Black Faithful To F.D.R.'s Bills

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—(UP)—Sen. Hugo L. Black, D., Ala., 51 years old and President Roosevelt's first nominee to the supreme court, was revealed by his voting record today to be a 100 percent New Dealer who voted for all the administration legislation outlawed by the Supreme Court in 1934-35-36. He believes in far-reaching federal authority in matters once reserved to the states.

Black is a "friend of the farmer" and a more liberal spender than Mr. Roosevelt. He disapproved and on occasion voted against large national defense appropriations. His only recorded votes on army and navy appropriation bills in the last five years were "no" although he frequently abstained from voting.

But from the hurly burly of the 1933 special session, including the Thomas currency inflation amendment, to the final last ditch vote on judiciary reorganization, Black demonstrated almost perfect loyalty to New Deal legislation. He often jostled against "the power trust and the fertilizer trust." He is an advocate of government production of electrical power and of a limited work week and minimum wages.

Some conservative Democrats consider Black to be a radical and may vote against his confirmation. Republicans already have rumbled a protest. And despite senate tradition, Black's confirmation was delayed to permit committee investigation of his fitness.

A southern Democratic member of the house blurted yesterday that Black was "A . . . anarchist." But the White House is confident he soon will be sworn as Mr. Roosevelt's first supreme court appointee.

Two paragraphs of a speech delivered by Black on March 24 in New York indicate his ideas on the Constitution and its interpretation. "I conceive it not only the right but the duty of congress," he said, "to protect the people of this nation from usurpation of the people's power by a bare majority of a court clinging to a thoroughly repudiated social and economic philosophy."

"Our Constitution and our government can best be preserved for the people by an interpretation of this Constitution as a document which puts human beings in the place of first importance. I believe the American people today place human rights above property rights."

For All Measures
Black is one of seven senators who, during Mr. Roosevelt's first term, supported each of the 24 bills which generally were considered to comprise the test for New Deal regularity. They were: 1933: Economy Act; AAA; NRA; TVA; and the gold clause. 1934: Gold Reserve Act; Emergency Air Mail; Bankhead Cotton; Reciprocal Tariff; Stock Exchange Regulation; Silver Purchases; and St. Lawrence Treaty. 1935: Work Relief; Social Security; Labor Relations; Public Utilities Holding Companies; Tax-Wealth; Guffey Coal; and World Court Protocol. 1936: Work Relief; Soil Conservation; Commodity Exchange; Florida Ship Canal; 1936 Revenue Act.

Senators who shared with Black that 24-to-0 voting record were: James F. Byrnes, D., S. C.; Alben W. Barkley, D., Ky.; Pat Harrison, D., Miss.; Joseph T. Robinson, D., Ark.; Morris Sheppard, D., Tex.; Elbert Thomas, D., Utah.

Legislation supported by Black and subsequently voided by the supreme court included: "Hot oil" section of National Industrial Recovery Act; Railroad Pension; NRA; AAA; AAA Processing Taxation; Guffey Coal Control; and Municipal Bankruptcy.

Black's record proves him to be a spender beyond Mr. Roosevelt's generosity in behalf of farmers and war veterans. He voted for the 1933 Economy Act, but joined soon thereafter in all efforts to limit cuts in veterans' compensation.

For Patman Bill
He voted in 1935 for the Patman bonus bill and to over-ride Mr. Roosevelt's veto of that measure. In the current session Black joined the farm bloc which defied Mr. Roosevelt's veto of a bill to continue low interest rates on federal land bank loans.

He has voted uniformly for higher income surtaxes, his latest support being in behalf of the La Follette proposal which was defeated this session.

But these spending and taxation lapses from New Deal regularity are more than offset by Black's record on judiciary reorganization. He was one of 20 senators who voted "no" last month on a motion to recommit Mr. Roosevelt's bill to the judiciary committee.

That futile stand for a lost cause may have been the factor finally persuading Mr. Roosevelt to name Black. It was as much proof as could be expected that the senator would not quickly surrender in the secret opinion-making sessions of the supreme court.

Under New Deal auspices Black conducted sensational investigations of lobbying and of air and ocean mail contracts with the post office department. He drafted and obtained senate passage in 1933 of a 30-hour work-week bill which was junked in behalf of NRA. He helped draft and sponsored the wage and hours bill which passed the senate and now awaits house action.

For Public Utilities

Black is counted among senators who favor public ownership of utilities. He battled for government operation of Muscle Shoals and production of cheap fertilizer there for the American farmer. He uniformly supported new taxation of privately produced electrical power and helped effect the Roosevelt "death sentence" for public utility holding companies. And he has been a "friend of the farmer." As the nation spun into depression in October, 1929, Black spoke in the senate as follows:

"I should like to see the power of Muscle Shoals used in the fixation of nitrogen and in the manufacture of fertilizer insofar as it was needed, and the surplus power sold to municipalities. I am unalterably and irrevocably opposed to turning over that power to private power companies for their own exploitation. The plant was built with the money of the people."

"I have made these remarks to let the public know that the southern farmer is still being ground down under the heel of the oppressor, who sells him fertilizer at prices which prohibit a reasonable profit, and to call attention to the fact that with the proper sentiment created on the part of the people of this nation the fertilizer trust and the power trust could no longer thwart the expressed will of the representatives of the people in congress assembled."

Less than a month ago Black appeared at Charlottesville, Va., in defense of minimum wages and maximum hours.

"Economic theory," he said, "is sound only insofar as it explains and accounts for economic fact. The pseudo-economic theory that shorter hours and higher wages reduce production fails to explain why some workers should be toiling long hours at starvation wages when others cannot find work, and further it fails to explain why a third of the population should not have adequate purchasing power to acquire the necessities of civilized life when millions now unemployed would be happy to produce those necessities if given half a chance."

"Indeed, the theory that shorter hours and higher wages will limit production is based on the assumption that our working population is fully employed, and this assumption, as everyone knows, is wholly incorrect.

"I am opposed to any real economy of scarcity as much as any man. But the economy of scarcity from which we are suffering today is, as I have said, a scarcity of purchasing power."

"In the modern world the farmer suffers when the town worker has no money to buy the products of the farm, and the town worker suffers when the farmer has no money to buy the products of the factory."

OHIO GAS RATES MAY BE HURLED TO COMMISSION

State-Wide Investigation May Follow Requests For New Prices

LIKE PHONE CONTEST

Uniform Cost for Each of Two Systems Possible

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 13—(UP)—Ohio today appeared to be moving toward a statewide investigation of natural gas rates by the Public Utilities Commission, similar to the Ohio Bell Telephone rate case which is still pending before the commission after nearly 14 years of litigation.

The utilities commission has moved for partial consolidation in one group of numerous local cases involving the East Ohio Gas Co. and in another group of cases involving the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and other subsidiaries of the Columbia Gas & Electric Corp. system.

The state-wide telephone rate inquiry developed from a similar start, with consolidation in 1923 in one case of applications filed by the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. for authority to increase rates in more than 40 municipalities.

Applications Filed
The East Ohio Gas Co. in recent months has filed local rate increase applications in rapid succession. One involving Massillon was the latest. Other cities where East Ohio is seeking rate increases by this method include: Canton, Barberton, Lakewood, Campbell, Struthers and Youngstown.

In addition East Ohio has appeals pending from local rate ordinances in Cleveland, Warren, Akron and Niles.

Columbia subsidiaries have both appeals and rate increase applications pending with respect to Toledo and Norwalk. They also are appealing from Columbus, Middletown, Franklin, Delaware and Elyria ordinances and are asking leave to increase rates in Lorain, Parma, Malta and Logan.

Adopting the Columbus appeal as a "key case" for the Columbia group and the Cleveland case for the East Ohio group, the utilities commission has ordered that "gate rate" testimony in each of these cases will be considered as applicable to all other cases in the group.

This testimony involves the fixing of property valuations and operating expense allowances for the production and transmission systems up to the point of delivery of gas at the city limits of each municipality.

A possible result would be the fixing of a uniform wholesale price for gas throughout each system. Variations in retail rates among the various cities in a system then would be governed only by differences in local distribution costs within the city limits.

Increased rate schedules proposed by the East Ohio Gas Co. in recent applications are almost the same for all cities concerned.

A minimum monthly charge of 83 cents, which entitles the user to 300 cubic feet of gas, is carried in most of these schedules. In some instances a rate of 70 cents a thousand for all excess consumption over 300 cubic feet is proposed, in others the 70-cent rate is applied to the next 1700 cubic feet and all gas consumed above 2000 cubic feet takes a rate of 50 cents a thousand.

Girl Accuses Dad in Slaying

LEVOID BARNETT (left) told officials at Belzoni, Miss., that her father, J. E. Barnett (right), tenant farmer, beat her brother to death and left the 11-year-old lad's body, horribly mutilated, in a cotton field for the buzzards. The elder Barnett denied he had killed his son.

Pastor, Family Visit In Ashville Community

Rev. H. H. Glick, wife and two children, David and Gretchen, of Bucyrus, Ohio, were here Thursday visiting among old friends. They are away from Bucyrus for a month's vacation and will spend some time at points along Lake Erie. Rev. Glick, who served the Ashville Lutheran congregation for 11 years was called to a Bucyrus church with a membership of 1100, has an assistant pastor and a secretary and is pleased with both the people and his church work there.

Property Purchased

Henry Prindle has purchased from Julia Weaver what is known as the Rhodes brick dwelling on North Cromley street. The Prindles now occupy their property, Hugh Smith and family who had occupied it moving to the Frank Hudson property recently vacated by he and his family, they removing to the dwelling recently purchased by Harry Margulus from John Sark. Some moving all at once and we think you will agree.

Personal Notes

Rancy Petty is doing, as well as we are able to tell by just looking at it, a real job of painting on the dwelling purchased by his mother from the Odd Fellows a few weeks ago. . . . We'll try and tell more about it by Saturday evening's paper, but just now, we can't wait any longer to tell you. Lloyd Kraft has a new Plymouth automobile all his, and it cost him only 25 cents. He just happened in on a bargain lot and that is how it happened he has it. . . . The North-stine reunion will be held on Sunday, August 22, at the Madison township school grounds. . . . The Boy Scouts of Troop 84, Ashville, spent Thursday at Olentangy park. . . . Dr. Joseph Staley and family spent Wednesday with Dewey and Mrs. Mullins at Sardinia, Ohio. . . . Louis Koch has rented what is known as the Huber farm of 242 acres in Walnut township. This is now, and has been for the last 25 or more years, occupied and operated by Jacob Glick and family. Mr. Glick will likely be a resident of Ashville by early next Spring.

Corn Yields Reported

Big corn stories are coming to the front now, the wheat threshing being practically all through. And while we are mentioning wheat it reminds us that Ray Heffner it is said on good authority, had a wheat yield of 2900 bushels taken from 100 acres. A few have reported near 40-bushel yields, but on small acreages. But now back to the corn. Reports from every section of our community say "it is the 'bumperest' crop we have ever had" and the prices are already being discussed by us old timer corn slathers who are good for 100 shocks or less every day. Ross county, with her 17-footer stalk of corn has Pickaway bluffed, but it is only for this year. Bill Curry, and we are with Bill, has his plans all worked out for at least a 20-footer for 1938. Bill says Pickaway is best and Ross must be put down in the class where she belongs.

God Gives Laws to a Nation

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Aug. 15 is Exodus 19:1-20:21, especially 20:1-17, the Golden Text being Matthew 22:37, 39, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. . . . Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.")

THAT A PEOPLE emerging from centuries of slavery and under-privilege should, within two months of its emancipation, formulate in 10 brief statements a law which has become the inspiration and essence of the best jurisprudence of all civilized nations for the subsequent 34 centuries is proof positive of the clear divine guidance of Israel's great law giver, Moses, in the formulation of the decalogue. It is proof that "God spoke all these words."

"All's Law, Yet All's Love"

It is interesting to note that despite the awe inspiring setting attending the promulgation of the law, in the quaking mountain, bathed in lightning and smoke, nevertheless, these Ten Commandments are prefaced not upon motives of fear, but rather upon the motive of love: "I am Jehovah thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me, etc." To God belongs first place in our devotion because of his love of us rather than our fear of him. "We love him because he first loved us." So, even at Mt. Sinai, "All's law, yet all's love."

"The Great Commandment"

When our Lord was challenged to state which was "the great commandment in the law," he replied by summing up all the commandments dealing with our duties to God, saying, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." In appreciation of God's deliverance of us we are to put him first in our affections, worship and service. The manner of our worship must be fit the object of our worship. "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image." This spiritual God demands a spiritual worship and not the carnalities of idolatry, whether it be the crude types of paganism or the more "cultural" type of our materialism. All profanity, perjury or blasphemy of idle and insincere use of God's name are forbidden: "Thou shalt not take the name of Jehovah thy God in vain." And for the preservation and cultivation of this spiritual religion God instituted the sabbath, saying, "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy." Right attitudes towards humanity are the fruits of right attitudes towards deity. Ethics and religion stand united as fruit and root. He who loves God will love his neighbor. And our closest neighbors are our parents: "Honor thy father and thy mother." We are to respect our neighbor's life: "Thou shalt not kill." Home and virtue are to be respected: "Thou shalt not commit adultery"; likewise property: "Thou shalt not steal"; and reputation: "Thou shalt not bear false witness." Not only overt acts of wrong doing but inner motives of the heart, detrimental to our neighbor, are included: "Thou shalt not covet." All things herein forbidden may be abstained from only as we cultivate love for God and our neighbor: "Love is the fulfilling of the law."

OPEN LETTERS

TO C.C.C. OFFICIALS

GENTLEMEN: On an average of once each week one of your ambulances runs through Circleville at a speed far in excess of the legal limit, sounding its siren as though a war had been declared. Is this necessary? If a person has been injured, or is ill, or if there is some other emergency, there is nothing wrong in taking a person to a hospital as quickly as possible, but I doubt very much if all the ambulance trips through Circleville are emergencies. If any member of the Civilian Conservation Corps needs medical attention, there are hospitals in Circleville, Chillicothe and Lancaster where he might be taken. There is no need to send an ambulance from a camp in southern Ross or Hocking counties into Columbus. Many Circleville persons have noted the carelessness with which C.C.C. ambulance operators handle their vehicles. Traffic is passed on both sides, red lights are ignored, and, generally speaking, lives of many persons are endangered. As I said before: if there is a reason for such haste, all is well; if there is no reason, please put an end to the practice.

CIRCUITEER

TO CAMPERS

FRIENDS: Next Wednesday you will open sessions of the 29th annual council of the Churches of Christ in Christian Union of Ohio at the Mount of Praise, E. Ohio street. From all indications the camp meeting this year promises to be the largest in the history of the event. All dormitory rooms have been rented for many months. Improved economic conditions will mean increases in attendance. Circleville welcomes you to the camp meeting. I hope your visit to Circleville is most enjoyable.

TO ROUNDTOWNERS

CITIZENS: I am still wondering what developments have been made in the program, discussed more than a year ago, for reconstructing the historic circle in a public park? That project would put Circleville "on the map" as far as tourist trade is concerned. Thousands of tourists pass through Circleville daily. A park of this type would mean they would stop here, put money in the pockets of our business men, increase the city's business in general. Other cities have capitalized on their historic features. We lost ours and sit back and do nothing about it. The money invested in such a project would be small compared to the returns. Why put such an important project "on the shelf?"

CIRCUITEER

TO HIGHWAY OFFICIALS

GENTLEMEN: Another accident took place this week on N. Court street near the corporation line. Fortunately the driver of the car escaped injury. His car made a complete turn in a skid and crashed into a telephone pole. The dangerous curve at that point of the highway has been called to your attention on several occasions. No improvements have been made. I suggest you do some work on that stretch of Route 28 before more accidents occur. You are well acquainted with accidents there in the past.

TO MEEKER TERWILLIGER

DEAR SIR: Congratulations on your appointment as chairman of the organization arranging plans for the celebration of the Ordinance of 1787 and settlement of the Northwest Territory. Circleville and Pickaway county are rich in history. An outstanding celebration can be presented here showing incidents depicting Pickaway county's history. The committees you name will in a great measure determine the success of the event.

CIRCUITEER

TO BUSINESS MEN

MERCHANTS: October will soon be here, and with it the annual Pumpkin Show. Have you planned any special sales event for that week? It has always been interesting to me to hear reports from various stores about Pumpkin Show business. Some merchants contend Pumpkin Show visitors are too interested in affairs of the celebration to do shopping. Others report Pumpkin Show week is one of the best business weeks of the year. Those who have good business that week have special window decorations, offer bargains that invite shoppers into their stores, and have quality, seasonal merchandise on display. Now is the time to make your plans and enjoy some of the business that has been passing you in former years.

TO POLICE DEPARTMENT

OFFICERS: A new law became effective Tuesday reducing the maximum speed limits in Ohio municipalities. Apparently there are many motorists in this city who are not interested in speed laws. I wish you would start a campaign against speeders. Your recent check at the Mingo-Main street traffic light convinced you of the number of persons violating traffic regulations. Occasional arrests do little good.

CIRCUITEER

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

By GEORGE E. GERHARDT

Where I should start this article and whether I should fall in line with Tom Wilson and call myself the antiquated or antedated reporter or should write it as one of my alleged friends denominates me, Lawyer Philpotts, puzzles me. Perhaps it should be entitled the Diary of Phineas Philpotts. At any rate I shall not start off with any remarks as to my appetite at breakfast or any cheerful remarks as to the weather, or on the day. As to tell the truth, I am grumpy and grouchy at my first waking moment until I eat.

But I do have in common with the antiquated reporter 'an on the way to the office stop' at the post-office or post as he calls it. The next chore is on the arrival at the office a call on the phone and a voice saying "Hello George, have you anything new? Have you heard from the opinion you asked of the Attorney General?" The person making the query daily being, if you have not already guessed, 'Scoop' Kibler. Then after a morning of routine work and glancing to the usual number of clients and a complaint of an impatient citizen concerning an alleged crime, my journey home soon and on the return journey a stop at the fire department and a new story being told to me by our genial fire-laddies.

In the afternoon a trip to Newark with Ray Davis on business, and on the way home saw a sign reading "State Park", and having read of this work of the moundbuilders or by whatever name the people who built these mounds were known, stopped to see what remains of their works or monuments. These consist of a huge circle with a bird effigy mound in the middle. After looking the mound over and remarking on the work involved and the purpose of the construction, asked Ray if he had ever seen the mound or circle on the Harry Montellus farm southeast of Circleville. A story is connected with it that the mound was built by the Indians, and that years after they had all gone, an old man with features and characteristics of an Indian appeared at the farmhouse on the farm with several companions and asked permission to dig in this old circle or mound, which he said had been erected by the Indians, with a stockade placed on top of it. The owner then gave permission, and said the Indian walked to a stone which had a figure of an arrow carved on it and stepped so many paces in the direction the arrow pointed and started to dig. The farmer left him digging. He returned later to find a big hole in the ground with a print left in the bottom as if some huge kettle or pot had been taken out. The men were gone and whatever they found was gone, too. Whether some tribal trappings, money, gold or what it was, was never known. Also have heard other tales of Indian lore and mound builders' traces about Circleville, but in common with many others, have never taken the trouble to read the books on the subject.

On arrival at the office, dropped in Weaver's and Smith's law office and found the fish were not biting, and heard some yarns concerning secret places, hidden holes and big ones that were to be caught in Canada.

In the evening saw some pictures on Don Mason's movie camera of a recent trip to Camp Perry and the Blue Hole at Castalia, Ohio, in which Don, Jack Ryan, Miller Jassell and myself were the actors. Movie cameras having been placed within the price range of the average man, quite a hobby of picture-taking has started in this city. Then home and a period of a half hour or so looking over my favorite magazine, "Life." I, having always had the idea that pictures along with printed matter was what our newspapers should strive for, rather than the plain words. And so to bed, without raiding the ice box at all, listening to the rain on the roof until overtaken by sleep.

RUSTLE OF SILKS

COPYRIGHT, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:
Mary Barrett, ambitious to become a dress designer, has established herself in Paris through a partnership with Countess Anetka that was made possible by Mark Sutherland, an American playboy she met on shipboard. Mary likes Mark but misses Tony Castle, owner of a smart New York shop who gave her her start. She left the Castle shop suddenly nearly three years previously after an altercation with Tony's head buyer. More and more she realizes she is in love with Tony. Her success in Paris has been phenomenal and, thanks to Mari Bara, the name she has assumed, Anetka's shop is growing famous. Mark Sutherland, in Paris again, tells Mary he has big plans for her. Mark introduces Mary to a prominent American fashion editor, Claire Todd. Mary writes to Tony but destroys the letter next morning. Claire Todd decides to "discover" Mari Bara for American fashion readers. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 22

CLAIRE SAID, "Hank Todd, if you insist on taking that costume home, I shall consider it grounds for divorce."

Hank tossed a handful of shirts into a gladstone bag, snapped it to and leaped over a chair.

"Woman, you may know women's fashions but you don't know the first thing about what the Well Dressed Man Prefers! I am most certainly going to take back those raspberry pants and that fine orange shirt. When I appear on the golf course at Westchester in that—"

"... the caddies will be looking for the pot of gold," Claire laughed resignedly and rolled the offending costume into a small package. She stuffed it into a drawer of the trunk she was packing and looked at the clock on the mantel.

"Oh, darling! I simply can't go without these gloves I promised myself. You remember the shop? Do you mind running down to get them? I'll be bathed, dressed and ready for our last jaunt as soon as you get back."

A few minutes later, the last of their three trunks was packed and Claire had only one small suitcase to finish.

There was a discreet knock and Mark Sutherland stood in the doorway.

"Hello! What's all this mean?"

"Hello, Mark! It means that the Todds are making one of their usual, unexpected getaways. Hank had a cable this morning that he's got to appear at a board meeting and we find we can get a boat from Southampton tomorrow, so we're flying to England tonight."

"Sorry you're leaving so abruptly. I had some things planned."

"So am I. You'll find highball things in the cabinet. Help yourself and I'll be with you in a minute. Husbands are nice to have, Mark, but they're really no help at moments like this."

"That's because you've spoiled him, Claire. You business women are too independent."

Claire sat back on her knees and regarded him wordlessly for a few minutes.

"What's the matter, pet, my tie the wrong color?" Mark asked.

"No, merely your attitude," she replied, settling down with her arms clasped around her knees. "Mother's going to have a heart-to-heart talk with you, Mark."

"Shoot," he invited and poured soda into his glass. "One for you?"

"No, thanks. . . . Mark, you knew Hank long before I did. Knew him in his 'backing' days. Would you say marriage was wrong for him? Would you say that he was less, or more happy?"

"Well, now—"

"Oh, come on, Mark, be serious for once!"

"He looks as contented as the proverbial cow to me."

"I'd go so far as to bet you that he'd even admit it, darling, and if you remember Hank, he was the lad who said there was absolutely nothing in matrimony for a man who could afford a valet. Right?"

"Right," he agreed.

"And he had everything you've got."

"I don't know, Mark. I don't know."

"You don't know, Mark. I don't know."

"You don't know, Mark. I don't know."

"You don't know, Mark. I don't know."

"You don't know, Mark. I don't know."

"You don't know, Mark. I don't know."

"You don't know, Mark. I don't know."

"Mrs. Todd, what are you leading up to?"

got. He had as much opportunity for fun, as many means of having his life made easy and comfortable."

"Ah, but he met you! A girl in a thousand! And the female is more deadly than the male, as we have always been taught."

"A girl in 10 thousand," she corrected. "And nothing deadly about me, I assure you."

"Didn't I propose to you once myself?"

"Yes, when you were 19 and had no sense, and I was 17 and did have! You know, Mark, I'm not very different from most brides; when I'm happy, I want every body else to be. I think I've been good for Hank and I think a girl with a head on her shoulders would be good for you."

Mark regarded her suspiciously. "Mrs. Todd, what are you leading up to?"

"Merely a suggestion," she returned amiably. "Merely a suggestion that you get wise to yourself and consider matrimony. There's more than one way of having fun but you seem to have stuck too close to the one way you know."

"Look here, you're not planning to divorce old Hank and set your cap for me are you?" He pretended to be appalled.

"Not if you were the last man on earth!" she returned with an equal lack of gallantry. "In fact, I doubt if you have much to offer as a husband. I happen to have a sentimental regard for you and hoped to show you a way to give yourself a break."

"Thanks," he said solemnly and stirred the swizzle stick in his glass.

"To be specific: How about this girl, Mari Bara?"

"Oh, yes, how about her? I meant to ask you that. You went around to see her collection, didn't you?"

"Yes, and liked it, but we'll talk about that later. By the way, I told her I'd like to have her to luncheon before I left. Please will you tell her I'll drop her note? I'm not going to have time to get it off before I leave."

She jumped up easily and made a note on a pad on her desk. Then she poured herself a glass of soda and resumed her pursuit:

"Mark, she's lovely, she's intelligent and she's a gentlewoman. You can't fool her or twist her around your little finger. She's not one to be impressed by your money or your accomplishments. No—"

"Let me go on. You two seem to have established a firm basis of companionship and you like her a lot more than you admit."

"Not more than I've admitted to her."

"Did you tell her you were in love with her?"

Mark rocked with laughter. "Claire, it must be this Paris air! You girls who are as brittle as glass in New York go to pieces when you get over here. Love! Why should I mention it? I'm not in love."

"Well, you're as near as you'll ever come to it. Take my advice: Life's more fun for two and the most pleasant approach to it is through a church. I don't know how she feels about you, but I have a hunch that she'd make a good wife for you. Tell me about her. Where does she come from?"

"Brooklyn," he answered shortly, "and that's all I know about her."

"She's a gentlewoman, Mark, which is more than can be said for a good number of the girls in our crowd. And don't let me hear of you going snubbing on me. Don't get any idea that you're too good for her."

"It's not that, Claire. It's just that the idea of marriage doesn't appeal to me."

Claire made a gesture of hopelessness. "Then don't waste her time. A career isn't going to be enough for that girl. I've seen her kind before. They're intense, whole-hearted in everything they do and halfway measures are not part of their program. As I well know, they suffice for you. Now run along, Mark, and let me dress. You'll find Hank dawdling along the way from the rue Cambon. And don't forget what I've told you!"

Mark pinched her cheek, having forgotten it already.

Scientific Study Made on Subject of Shaving

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
WE HAD SOME very good advice on shaving from Jerome Ephraim (reported in this column in May), and it proves sound when examined.

Shave Older Than Romans Scipio is credited with having introduced shaving as a daily practice among the Romans. But shaving itself is much older than that.

The Bible (Numbers 6, 5 and 9. Leviticus 19 and 19), has references to shaving. The ancient Egyptians undoubtedly shaved; when I was in Egypt a year or two ago my guide gave me a razor and hone made of a kind of hard, smooth stone of great antiquity; he said he had shaved often with similar ones, and if sufficient time were given to the honing he preferred to shave with it rather than a modern razor.

Coming down to today, everyone discusses the relative "toughness" of beards. Some men think they have very tough beards, and their ideas appear to be borne out by the Mellon research. Of the shavers under observation in their shaving clinic, there were twenty blonds and eleven brunets. Five of the blonds and six of the brunets had very coarse beard hair. But sensitivity to the discomforts of shaving was experienced by some of the light bearded as much as the coarse bearded.

The upper lip and the chin give more trouble than any other part of the face because the coarse hairs grow there more abundantly. There are 80 to 110 hairs on the upper lip, 70 to 120 on the chin, as against 20 to 40 on the lower cheek, and 30 to 80 on the upper cheek. Besides, of course, the contours of the lip and chin are more uneven and the surfaces more difficult to get at than the cheek.

The rate of hair growth is most rapid immediately after shaving. (To Be Continued Tomorrow) luxurious than a good shave, and nothing more annoying than a poor one: and the annoyance lasts all day with a rough, stinging, sore face. It certainly deserves enough attention that the shaver should take the most loving care of his instruments and all the appliances, such as soap and brush and water.

Nowadays it is a subject of interest to women as well as men, since the removal of hair from legs is considered so desirable, and since shaving is considered by dermatologists as the best way of removing hair (removal of superfluous hair permanently is best done by electrolysis). So we intend to review this Mellon report at some length.

A little history is interesting. I suppose everyone has wondered how the Romans, who are always depicted with smooth faces, shaved. It doesn't seem to have been as much of a problem with the Greeks and ancient Hebrews, if we can believe the classic representations of

GULLIC'S HOMER COUNTS

Kress and Pfleger Clout
For Homers

BY UNITED PRESS
Minneapolis had picked up another game over Columbus today by taking both games of a double-header with Louisville, 12-3 and 20-7, while the Red Birds split a twin bill with Milwaukee.

Red Kress led the attack in the first game with four doubles, equalling an American association record shared by 10 other players. His batting spree drove in five runs. He drove in three more scores in the second game when he rapped off his 26 circuit clout of the season. Roy Pfleger also hit a home run in the second game to go into a tie with Kress for homers.

The Millers had the second game on ice in the first inning when 11 players looked across home plate.

Milwaukee took the first game from Columbus 3-2, but the Birds came back to take the second 2-1. The Brewers had only three hits in the first game but won when Gullik homered in the seventh with one on.

Milner pitched a better game than Macon in the nightcap, but the Miller hurler got out of several tight spots. Crouch brought in the winning run with a single in the seventh.

St. Paul and Indianapolis split a twin bill. The Saints won the first game 9-5, but the Indians rallied to take the second 12-6.

Don French, Indianapolis pitcher, was knocked unconscious when a foul ball he had hit bounced from the plate and struck him on the right ear. He received credit for winning although Page pitched the rest of the game.

Toledo won 4-1 from Kansas City in a hectic game that saw the Blues garner more hits than the Hens, but Niggeling permitted three unearned runs before being relieved in the seventh, while Stine handed the Hens another in the eighth.

NEW YORK TEAM IS NEARLY 'IN'

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(UP)—With another contender beaten back, the New York Yankees were as near to the American league pennant today as a team can get without actually winning it.

Their three most serious rivals, the Tigers, Red Sox and White Sox, haven't anything with which to stop the world champions. During the last 16 days they all tried it. The Yanks licked the Tigers two out of three, they blackkicked the White Sox four straight, and shellacked the Red Sox three out of four. When you can win nine out of 11 from your closest rivals, it's time to shout: "The Yanks are in."

With 54 games left, the Yanks can break even—win 27 and lose 27—and still win. It would take 40 out of 55 or .727 baseball for the Red Sox to finish in front and 38 out of 50 or .760 for the White Sox to do it.

The Yanks are now hitting .700 and there's no reason to believe they can't hold somewhere near that pace, especially when outfielders Selkirk and Henrich return to regular duty and the pitching staff gets squared away. Lefty Gomez, who flew to the bedside of his mother in California, is due to rejoin the team today in Philadelphia.

THE DELAYED SQUEEZE
IF A DECLARER can run 11 consecutive tricks, but has no finesse or setting-up play for his small slam, he sometimes can make it by giving up an early trick to the enemy. When he later takes in his eleventh trick, the opposition may be squeezed. Had he not given up the early trick, the effort to squeeze would come on the tenth instead of the eleventh trick and the crucial opponent then could comfortably pick a harmless discard.

South's opening bid on this deal was 1-No Trump, North called 3-Diamonds, South 3-No Trumps, North 4-No Trumps and, as they were using natural bidding and not the Four-Five No Trumps Convention, South jumped to 6-No Trumps.

West's spade Q was the opening lead, which South took with the A. When the diamond A was cashed and West's void was indicated, the declarer could see only 11 tricks in sight. As West could no doubt protect both clubs and spades and East had the diamonds, no squeeze was in sight.

A knife sharpener is an essential part of the household equipment. Not even an expert carver can do much with a dull knife. He sure to wash the knife after it is sharpened, to remove any invisible particles of steel.

The declarer, however, saw a possibility of making a delayed squeeze on West. So with this in mind he cashed the diamond K, and gave up a diamond trick to East. On these four tricks West let go hearts. When East won the diamond, he returned a heart and West was obliged to discard a spade. The diamond Q was now cashed and West let go another spade. The clubs A, K and Q were now played and then the heart K. At this point, West held the spades J-10 and the club J and had to toss one of them on the heart trick, so that the declarer took the remainder of the tricks.

JAPS, CHINESE SOLDIERS FIGHT IN MAJOR CITY

back the Chinese, half a mile inside the congested Chapel native quarter, they passed rows of little Chinese dwellings to reach blocks of semi-modern buildings interspersed with vacant lots.

The Chinese were replying heavily to Japanese fire.

Great, sleepy China had roused herself. It looked as if matters had got beyond all control, and that a war which must mean terrible slaughter, was on.

Chih-Chung in Command

Gen. Chang Chih-Chung, heroic commander of the Chinese army in the 1932 "Shanghai war," was named in supreme command of the army in the Shanghai-Nanking area.

Division after division of Chinese regulars concentrated on Shanghai.

The Japanese navy position seemed one of urgent danger and it was reported on most reliable authority that the high command had appealed to Tokyo for immediate reinforcements.

Thirty-three Japanese warships were concentrated here, but the Chinese had massed a great army. Troop trains were given the right of way on all railroads, converging on Shanghai.

A battle that looked like the start of a new Shanghai war started in the northern part of the city this afternoon, following three minor clashes this morning.

Chinese regulars and a landing party of Japanese bluejackets began fighting just off the rifle range, in the northern area and near the Japanese barracks.

Rifle and machine gun fire were started and proceeded for some time.

The Chinese responded shot for shot. The Japanese realized that they were in for a fight. Orders were sent back for a battery of field guns and for tanks, which were soon in line.

Smoke Clouds Visible

Great clouds of smoke became visible from the international settlement, between the fighting zone and the river. From vantage points on the northern fringe of the settlement it looked as if whole blocks must be aflame. The fires were caused by Japanese field gun shells, apparently.

The fighting centered along the old Shanghai-Woosung branch railroad. This was one of the most bitterly fought objectives in the 1932 fighting. It is important because along the little line, Japanese could bring men in from the Woosung area at the mouth of the Yangtze, where most of their warships are anchored.

Smoke clouds from the artillery fire and the fires it started billowed over the thickly congested Chapel native area, at the southwest side of the fighting zone.

Sporadic firing, sniping mostly, broke out in other sectors about the city.

Foreign troops, including United States marines, were ready for action and the Shanghai corps of volunteers was mobilized. The volunteer corps included four companies of American citizens, including one company of cavalry and one of Filipino residents here.

The volunteers took defensive positions and tried as far as was possible to cut off the main international settlement from that portion of it which Japanese bluejackets were guarding.

Troops had not been called out, though a few of the United States marines went on patrol duty, during the early part of today's fighting.

Professional Russian "white guards," employed by the volunteer corps, manned important spots along the settlement border.

The danger of a catastrophe in the international settlement was more acute than it had been in the five years since the 1932 war.

To reach the fighting zone from the river, Japanese seamen would have to detour for miles unless they passed through the international settlement. Forseeing this, Lieut.-Gen. Shing Chen-Nan, representing Chinese Supreme Commander Chang, announced that if

The croton oil search was being made because a bottle of it was found in the office locker of Mrs. Hahn's husband Philip, a telegrapher. He said his 12-year-old step-son—Mrs. Hahn said she was the widow of Dr. Max Matschiki, a Viennese physician—found it at home. Hahn said he took it to the office and planned to turn it over to the police "if anything happened." Police found it yesterday.

Police reported to Prosecutor Dudley Miller Outcall that they found symptoms of a type of illness caused by doses of croton oil when they were called to the home of George Gsellman, 67, who died on July 6.

Autopsies were being performed here on the bodies of Gsellman and Jacob Wagner, 78, a gardener who died on July 3, and in Colorado Springs, Colo., on the body of George Obendorfer 67, a Cincinnati cobbler, who died there Aug. 1.
